questioning my walls ("just why are you doing that?") Working with mud keeps me on my toes and forever curious. The simple truth is, mud will never be a standardized material like cement. Each batch of dirt is different and has its own personality. Earth plasters have a slower drying time and must be built up more slowly than cement.

retaining wall with the overall impacts to utilities, wetlands, the environment, or adjacent properties. Impacts to wetlands often demand construction of retaining walls due to permitting requirements to avoid or minimize wetlands impacts if possible. Exact locations of retaining walls will require further refinement during the design phase.
