The Four Noble Truths refer to and express the basic orientation of Buddhism in a short expression: we crave and cling to impermanent states and things, which are dukkha, "incapable of satisfying" and painful. This craving keeps us caught in samsara, the endless cycle of repeated bhava ("becoming") and jāti (literally: "birth", interpreted as rebirth), and the continued dukkha that comes with it.

For coherence theories in general, truth requires a proper fit of elements within a whole system. Very often, though, coherence is taken to imply something more than simple logical consistency; often there is a demand that the propositions in a coherent system lend mutual inferential support to each other.

All this chaos, genocide, ethnic cleansing and disaster we see in this world have a genuine purpose. It is all very carefully planned by a few "invisible", super-rich people behind the scenes, high above any power structure that the ordinary citizen knows about. They want to create a One World Government with themselves in charge, making the rest of us slaves in a Super Socialist State ...

Growing up, my home was a collection of other people's things. My parents bought plenty of things new, but many of the biggest items in our home didn't come from a store. My dad made some of our furniture—the dining table of my early childhood, some side tables, and the patio furniture out front—on his woodworking bench in the garage. Our couches?

The book titled was written in Greek, presumably as it was aimed at non-Jews, and Greek was the leading written language in Europe at that time. Exodus is the Latinised form of the title; and the Latin text has been translated many times into more-or-less modern English, but the title 'Exodus' was retained. The word is composite, meaning something like 'way out' in a neutral sense.
